New Council Members Announced

The Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence (CHRE) welcomed the announcement by the Appointments Commission of the names of six non-executive members of its reformed Council.

The new members took up office on 1 January 2009 under the leadership of Baroness Jill Pitkeathley. The Council will provide strategic direction to ensure that CHRE fulfils its statutory functions and that the organisation retains the trust and confidence of patients and the public.

Commenting on the announcement, Baroness Pitkeathley said:

"We are indeed fortunate to have recruited a Council of such experience and wisdom. We shall work together to ensure that that CHRE will be focused on delivering its statutory functions and activities, achieving good outcomes for patients and the public and developing good working relationships with our key stakeholders."

The new non-executive Council members are:

- Ann Curno
- Andrew Hind (Member and Chair of the Audit Committee)
- Ian Hamer (Wales appointment)
- Sally Irvine
- Stuart MacDonnell (Northern Ireland appointment)
- Jayne Scott (Scotland appointment)

Recruitment and selection of the reconstituted Council was carried out by the independent Appointments Commission. All appointments were made on merit following a fair, open and transparent recruitment and selection process.

The Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence is an independent body accountable to the UK Parliament. It is a UK wide body and works with health ministers in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. Its primary purpose is to promote the health, safety and well-being of patients and other members of the public. It oversees and scrutinises the health professions regulators, works with them to identify and promote good practice in regulation, carries out research, develops policy and gives advice. It was established in 2003 and was reformed in 2008.
